STEWARDSHIP OF PRAYER AND REFLECTION

He commands even the unclean spirits and they obey him.

We don't hear what Jesus taught in the synagogue, but Mark tells us that "he taught them as one having authority and not as the scribes." What would the scribes have said about a man with an unclean spirit in the synagogue? Probably that he was corrupting the place with his presence and that he should be cast out. But Jesus chooses to cast out the unclean spirit, not the person. He is not concerned, as the scribes would be, of becoming unclean himself. He teaches—and acts—with greater authority than the people had ever witnessed.

No se nos menciona lo que Jesús enseñaba en la sinagoga, pero Marcos nos dice que "enseñaba como quien tiene autoridad y no como los escribas". ¿Qué hubiesen dicho los escribas acerca del hombre con el espíritu inmundo en la sinagoga? Probablemente que estaba corrompiendo el lugar con su presencia y que deberían de expulsarlo. Pero a quien Jesús expulsa es al espíritu inmundo, no a la persona. Jesús no se preocupa por contraer la inmundicia, tal como hubiese sido la preocupación de los escribas, sino que enseña y actúa con una autoridad más grande de la que habían visto la gente jamás.

Word of Life / Palabra de Vida

God sends prophetic interruptions into our lives. Are we listening? Jesus is the prophetic interruption; He is the word-made-flesh that breaks into human history and makes the kingdom of God present. Jesus challenged the patterns of belief and behavior of those who considered themselves most righteous. By teaching, and healing with his own authority, especially on the Sabbath, he puts himself at odds with the worldly powers. God interrupts our lives through other people who confront our beliefs and behaviors that are not rooted in the Gospel and offer a vision of new hope and possibility.

Dios envía interrupciones proféticas en nuestras vidas. ¿Estamos escuchando? Jesús es la interrupción profética; Él es la palabra hecha carne que se rompe en la historia humana y hace que el reino de Dios presente. Jesús desafió los patrones de creencia y comportamiento de aquellos que se consideraban más justos. Al enseñar y curar con su propia autoridad, especialmente en el día de reposo, se pone en desacuerdo con los poderes mundanos. Dios interrumpe nuestras vidas a través de otras personas que confrontan nuestras creencias y comportamientos que no están enraizados en el Evangelio y ofrecen una visión de nuevas esperanzas y posibilidades.
